A TURKISH STORY.

The Gazette des Tribunaux relates a strange affair in Turkey:—"In a village near the town of Niebe, not far from the Balkans, there lived some years ago a Bulgarian family, consisting of the parents, a son and daughter. The latter having reached the age of sixteen, married and came to live with her husband in a distant village; and about the same time the son, whose name was Yanko, and who had just entered the age of manhood, proceeded constantly to seek his fortune. Yanko did not entertain much affection for his parents, who had not treated him kindly, and did not trouble himself to communicate with years, and years passed away without her hearing anything of him. One day, a young man, whilst the daughter, whose name is Mariza, was engaged in household duties in the midst of her children, a fair one which she had brought from her parents, began barking joyfully, and at the same moment a handsome young man covered in dust, as if he had been long walking in the street, and clapping his in his arms, cried out, "I am Yako, your brother!" He was so much changed that he did not at first recognise him, but when, after a time, she was satisfied that he was her relative, she welcomed him with great joy, and the children clustered around him. He

Among the children some little presents he had brought from Constantinople, inquired after his parents, and related his adventures. He then arranged with his father to sleep in her house that night, and to go the next day to his parents, who continued to live in their village; and he was obliged, in order to surprise them, he would enter their cottage and ask for hospitality without saying who he was. The next day he was set out, but it was evening before he reached the village in which his parents dwelt. He went straight to their house and knocked at the door. His mother opened to him; he begged for a night's hospitality; and according to the custom of

"Do you not remember," said the woman to her husband (who afterwards related what took place) that he has a belt apparently well filled with gold pieces? "And," she added significantly, "why should we lose such a favorable opportunity of enriching ourselves?" He is our guest," answered the husband, who understood what she meant. "Whereas that matter!" cried she, "Our son is not now of age," remarked the man—least not of him," replied the woman, the doubt he, since we have not heard of him for so long." After some discussion the woman, who exercised great ascendancy over her husband, obtained his consent to murder and rob the stranger. Accordingly, in the dead of the night, she stole into the master's room, and killed him by blows from a hatchet; and then she possessed herself of the belt containing his little treasure. On the next day her daughter, son-in-law, and grandchildren arrived full of joy. "Welcome be the former, the moment she entered the house, 'did you recognize him?' 'Recognize him—who?' exclaimed the mother, 'recognize deadly pale.' 'Why, Yanko, you

"My brother!" The mother raised her voice, crying, and fell senseless. "Wretched man! He has killed the father in great agitation," whispered the mother, "and now he has killed you! Did I not speak to you about my son?" The daughter saw that something terrible had occurred, and asked: "What has become of my brother?" "He is dead," answered the father, pointing to the body. Marjita rushed in, and saw the body of her brother. The crime scene was known in the village, and the telegraph stations (principal inhabitants) arrested the whole family and conveyed them to Nicholas. Shortly after, the Grand Vizier, who was making a visit of inspection in the province, arrived in the town, and on hearing an part of the fair, he ordered the woman and her husband to be brought to trial, and at the sister and her husband should be assessed. The trial then took place before a tribunal composed partly of Muslims and partly of Christians. The husband was acquitted and the woman was condemned to death. A question arose as to the manner in which the sentence should be carried out. All the judges except one proposed hanging her, but one, the Greek bishop, of the district, to which community the crime belonged, represented that his church interdicts the hanging, or decapitation of women, and he therefore requested the

NEEDLE WOMEN OF LONDON.—A correspondent of the London Times, describing the state of the great Mantua-making establishments in that city, says work is commenced every morning at 7 o'clock, and continues till 11 o'clock at night, with only intervals of about 10 minutes for each meal. The ordinary day of leisure is Sunday. From Monday morning to Saturday night they are compulsory prisoners. They are not allowed to cross the threshold even to purchase a pair of those, and must employ their friends or hire do to it for them. Nor is the accommodation indoors such as in any way to accustom them to this close confinement. There are twelve are employed in an unventilated room twelve feet square, and their bedrooms are equally uncomfortable.

INFLUENCE OF MISSIONS UPON COMMERCE.—In 1846, the Church Missionary Society commenced operations at Abeokuta, Western Africa. One result of its efforts has been that a very considerable quantity of cotton is sent to the English market every year. It was not till 1862 that the first bale was packed by machinery, and pressed and packed for European consumption, were

AN ANECDOTE WORTH LAUGHING AT is told of a man who had an infirmity as well as an appetite for fish. He was anxious to keep up his character for honesty even while enjoying his favourite meal; and while merrily eating a bill with the merchant, as the story goes, slipped a codfish under his coat to keep the garment too short to cover the theft, and the merchant once perceived it.

'Now,' said the customer, anxious to improve all opportunities for honest attention to his virtues, 'Mr. Merchant, I have traded with you a great deal, and have treated you up honestly and promptly; have I not?'

'Oh yes,' said the merchant; 'I must now complain.'

'Well,' said the customer, 'I always insist that honesty is the best policy, and the best rule to live and die by.'

'That's so,' replied the merchant.

And the customer turned to depart.

'Hold on, friend,' cried the merchant.

'Speaking of honesty, I have a bit of advice to give you. Whenever you come to bargain, you had better wear a long, coat and steal a shorter fish.'

QUAINT CRITICISM.—A newspaper here states that at the breaking of the ground for the commencement of the Lynch and Tennessee Railroad at Lynchburg, cerycians slowly and solemnly read a prayer, at the conclusion of an old two-foot man, who had been reared on one foot on his spade, and his on the handle, looking intently in the villain's face, strained himself up and said very audibly:—“Well, I reckon dat de first time de Lord's ober been writ to subject ob railroads.”

GRAND TRUNK CODE.—The degree of crime are thus defined: “He who steals a million is only a financier. Who steals a half million is only a defaulter. Who steals a hundred thousand is a rogue. Who steals fifty thousand is a knave. But he who steals a pair of boots or a loaf of bread is a scoundrel of the deepest dye, and des-

The latest dog story is of two dogs that fell to fighting in a saw mill. In the course of the tussle, one of the dogs went plump.

"My son, would you suppose that Lord's prayer could be engraved in a stone no larger than the area of a half dime?"

"Well, yes, father, if a half-dime is large in everybody's eye as it is in your mind."

"I think there would be no difficulty in fitting it on about four times."

CROW EATING.—A worthy old farmer, residing in the vicinity of Lake Mohonk, was worried to death last summer by bobolinks. They found fault with his tables, and he had nothing left to eat.

'Darn it,' said old Isaac, one day, 'a fuss you're making. I can eat anything I want to eat.'
'Can you eat a crow?' said one of the boarders.
'Yes, I kin eat a crow.'
'Got you a hat,' said the guest.
The bet was made, the crow caught and nicely roasted, but, before morning up, he contrived to season it with good old Scotch snuff. Isaac eat down to the bone. He took a good bite, and began to chew.
'Yes, I kin eat a crow! (another bite)
'An awful fass, I kin eat crow; but I'll darned if I hanker arter it.'

his advantage is lost to it, as we have shown, during six months of the year. Some of the drawbacks that we have mentioned are inherent in the very nature of the case and others have obviously been caused by mismanagement. The line, it must be remembered, could not be made without the assent of the Canadian Parliament, and it does not happen that, though the course selected may not have been the best for the shareholders, it has by no means availed the shareholders of leading members of the Legislature. We also recommended a careful inquiry into the state of the Atlantic and St. Lawrence Railway before it was purchased for the Grand Trunk. It was purchased for that purchase was made, and the guarantee with which it was accompanied, certain it is that, whoever may be responsible for the fall of the Grand Trunk Railway, it has been to many a source of riches. —We hope that the day may come when the history of the Grand Trunk can be fairly and intelligently written, for we are sure that it will be found full of warning and instruction.—London Times, Nov. 3.

non before we saw the like of it. The length was 27½ feet; thickness 16 feet; from nose to the last gill 7 feet; its mouth was open, 30 inches across; the foremost fin, 3 feet 3 inches; and the tail, from point of fin, 7 feet. The liver yielded 165½ tons of oil, and was sold for £16 10s. The whole body could not have been less than six tons. It was caught by a six-oared boat, and the men had great difficulty to get it ashore. Instead of landing at six o'clock in the morning, it was seven at night before they got to the shore; and had they been assisted by two other boats' crews, it would not have managed it in two days. When caught it seemed to have taken mouthful of herrings and then rolled in the net. When the men began hauling the nets, which were new, they found it twisted with the ropes five times round it. It died in a very short time, or the would have run a very hard chance for its lives.—Orkney Herald.

It appears that Captain Luckey was a man who was able to get along with people on friendly terms with the people, and he was willing and anxious to know the things of our Bible, he presented some of the things with one and distributed some to the others. This coming to the knowledge of the people created such a sensation and disturbance that a guard of four men was put to watch the vessel for seventeen days, and he was taken upon so shore he would have taken prisoner. Finding the anger against him so great, Captain Luckey resolved to plan some means of escape. He accordingly got over the side of his vessel at night, and laid himself down in his taking with him one of his crew to arrive at the boat back. He landed at another place on the coast and made friends with a Spaniard whom he met, and got him to conduct him to the mountains, there to await an opportunity to take him to Gijón. Having arrived in disguise the first and second secret agents entered the town undetected. The first came to the pier and fell in with an English captain, who kindly took him on board a small vessel and locked him in his stateroom. Six hours, when taking advantage at the moment of crossing the harbor in disguise he got on board a vessel just on the eve of sailing for Liverpool, and thus made his escape. He is now waiting the arrival of his

Mr. INGRAM'S PRESENTMENT OF DEED.—It would seem that Mr. Ingram, prior to his trip to North America, entertained a deep-seated conviction that he would not return. When about to leave for Southampton to embark, he made a poignant shaking hands in the most kind and neat manner with his employer, from the highest to the lowest, and expressed to each and indeed to all his friends, the presentiment he had that they would not see him alive. It was in vain that they endeavored to rally him upon his apprehensions. His idea was evidently not to be dispelled.

It caused no small confusion in the mastery which these depressing thoughts had acquired over the deceased gentleman's imagination. When they found, too, that the idea was not to be removed, and was made by some of his friends to dissuade him from making the voyage, if he could not enter upon it with confidence. To the representations the only answer he gave was to say that the feeling which urged him to go was even stronger than the reluctance he felt that it would be his last journey home.—Court Journal.

to a close-fighted a match, and accidently set her clothes on fire. Her husband awakened by the flash, and found her lying on the floor enveloped in flames. She was so much injured that she died a few days subsequently.

DIPHTHERIA.—The Port Byron Gazette says: "A lady informed us a few weeks since that she had cured five of her children and one of her neighbor's children by the following remedy: When the symptoms first discovered, take Spanish flies, put in a mix with Venice turpentine, spread on piece of soft leather or cloth, and lay it on the throat, which will raise a blister, and soon remove the disease from the throat."

ANOTHER MISBORN MAN.—What a great way our great men have of shuffling off their days! Who can tell what has become of Sir Edmund Head? To English papers there is no mention of him, the laureate's name is never heard. Oh! the illegitimacy of Coalitions, who first use a man up, and then kick him off like a pair of old boots.—Hampden Times.

ARRIVAL OF THE "CANADIAN."

Portland, Dec. 3.
The Canadian arrived at 10.30 this afternoon, having left Liverpool at 1.30 on the afternoon of the 29th, and Queenstown on the 23rd of November.

The British steamer "Princess of Wales" had returned from London at 1.30 on the 29th, and the Emperor Napoleon had quietly arrived in England, and would reach London that afternoon.

The railway stations were besieged. The report turned out to be a hoax.

The financial situation underwent an important change on the 21st, an arrangement having been consummated by which the Bank of England lent two millions sterling to the Bank of France, and an advance of a quarter to three-eighths per cent.

The Times' article upon the arrangement will terminate the prevailing uncertainty in the money market and lead to an early reduction of the Bank rate of discount.

The Daily News says the public opinion is generally in favor of the measure, but cautions the public against being too sanguine, and shows that as a drain is going on from both countries, the Bank of England has purchased at the ultimate cost of increased future difficulty.

There was no gold withdrawal from the Bank on the 21st.

In the discount market there was a tendency to greater ease. Good bills were taken at a reduction from Bank minimum.

The demand at the Bank was moderate.

The result of the American Presidential election is commented on by the English press with satisfaction.

The Empress Eugenie had arrived in Scotland and was temporarily quartered in Edinburgh, preparatory to visiting the Duke of Hamilton.

The British steamer "Bulwer," Capt. McClinton, had returned from the deep sea route for the North Atlantic Cable. This result was not known.

It is rumored that Count de Montigny is going to leave on a special mission with an autograph letter from the Emperor. It is also rumored that Foreign Minister Delcasse is going to leave on a special mission, and that he will be succeeded by Waldeck.

Austria-Vienna speaks of a guarantee from the German Government, joined by Prussia, for securing Vienna, Austria, as necessary for the security of Germany.

It is announced that the English Ministers at Vienna and Berlin are to change places.

The Bombay mail of October 22nd has reached England, and the movement was making satisfactory progress at Bombay. There was a vague rumor of probably an early reduction of 25 cent on the rates on coffee goods and yarn.

The position of affairs is unchanged. No new movement is reported. The clergy of the Roman Catholic Church were paying homage to Victor Emmanuel.

The Cardinal Archbishop of Naples was about to retire to his See.

The Donator General of Naples, with the young Prince, had arrived at Rome. The French were about to occupy Tarragona.

The Queen of Spain has presented a rich sword to General Goyon. It is reported that Goyon has declared he would not deliver material belonging to the Bourbon troops who took refuge in the city of Valencia, either to France or to Victor Emmanuel.

Negotiations were, however, progressing on the subject.

In Italy the siege of Gaeta is continued. The batteries of Capaci and San Agio had been placed in a position, difficult to reduce the place.

The Piedmontese bombarded the suburbs on the 12th.

The Neapolitan troops continued to fight resolutely, but the defection of its officers was increasing.

Col. Fianelli had surrendered the battery of Chassiers to the Piedmontese.

Further resistance of the Bourbon troops was displayed by the King of Naples, the Chief, and the confusion which prevailed.

It is believed that the complete evacuation of Gaeta has been completed.

Garibaldi's reception in Sicily has been prepared for the reception of French troops.

Explanations are said to have been asked from Piedmont by France, whether it is its intention that Garibaldi should be allowed to take to Sicily, or whether it is its intention to take to Sicily, or whether it is its intention to take to Sicily.

ARRIVAL OF THE "ASIA."

New York, Dec. 7.

The steamship Asia arrived this afternoon.

Hostilities had recommenced in China. The Chinese had recommenced the attack on the North. Two steamships were fought on the 21st, and the British ship was captured.

The allied army was waiting in hostile position before Peking. Negotiations were opened by the Chinese, but not in a satisfactory manner.

Reported that Francis II. was seriously ill, having been a blood vessel. A steamer had been sent to Naples to visit the Emperor.

A change has occurred in the Neapolitan Ministry. Prince Joazeiro has been appointed Minister of the Interior.

Vague rumors are in existence that the Emperor would be soon crowned on the occasion of the coronation of Victoria.

The Arctic exploring steamer "Polaris" returned from her expedition to the North Pole.

The London Globe confirms the rumor that the Duke of Newcastle will receive the recent order of the garter.

There is a rumor of a new loan for Turkey by the Russian Government.

The Emperor Eugenie had arrived in Scotland and was temporarily quartered in Edinburgh, preparatory to visiting the Duke of Hamilton.

The British steamer "Bulwer," Capt. McClinton, had returned from the deep sea route for the North Atlantic Cable. This result was not known.

YOUNG MEN.

There is an evil habit growing up among boys, in solitude, often reformed to jealousy, and which is a serious obstacle to manhood, not only because it is a source of mental and physical weakness, but also because it is a source of protracted indolence, and day dissipation. Self abuse is one of the most powerful enemies to health, for nothing else so thoroughly enervates the human system, its the dreamers of victims through a few suffering down to an untimely grave. It destroys the nervous system rapidly, wastes the energies of life, causes mental derangement, prevents the proper development of the physical and mental faculties, and is a source of many other evils.

Dr. AMOS & SON take pleasure in stating that they have invented a most valuable instrument for the cure of the above named disease. It has been subjected to a test by the most eminent physicians in London, Paris, Philadelphia and New York; it has been declared the only useful instrument ever yet devised for the cure of Seminal weakness, or any of the genital organs caused by the action of youth.
